Soviet Accuses U.S. Of Massing Ships, Planes in Gulf Ārea

MOSCOW - The Soviet Union accused the United States on Wednesday of "grossly violating" international law by moving ships and aircraft to the Gulf war area. It said said the actions were creating a threat to peace and international

The Soviet news agency Tass said Moscow did not recognize the "restrictions" on air and sea traffic 'arbitrarily established" by U.S. forces in the area.

The actions taken by the United States of America in the Persian Gulf are creating a grave threat to peace and international security. Tass said in an official statement, a form of report that is rarely used and is thought to reflect the highest level of Kremlin thought.

The Tass statement came as Iraq called for an extraordinary meeting of Arab foreign ministers to discuss its 42-month war with Iran.

Meanwhile, Iraqi and Iranian troops engaged in a second day of fierce fighting for Majnoon Island in the Iraqi marshlands. There are huge oil reserves under the island.

Government sources in Baghdad said Iraqi helicopter gunships shot down two Iranian helicopters in attacks to recapture the island. But Iran said the counterattack was "firmly checked, leaving 850 enemy troops killed" and called the action "nothing less than large-scale sui-

The agency dismissed U.S. statements that its ships and planes had been sent to the Gulf only to protect shipping and aircraft amid fighting by Iran and Iraq.

Tass accused the United States of arbitrarily establishing a safe shipping zone, "grossly violating the commonly recognized norms of

It cited the 1958 open seas convention and the Chicago convention on international civil aviation as accords it believed the United States had breached.

U.S. action in the Gulf amounted to nothing more than an "attempt by the United States to confirm by a massive show of armed force imperialist claims to the Persian Gulf as another area of U.S. 'vital interests,' " Tass said. The agency added: "Washington would like to dictate its will to the countries of the region.

The presence of U.S. armed forces was "provoking a conflict situation" in the region, Tass said. "The U.S. government should understand that it will bear full responsibility for the possible dangerous consequences of its policy

Agents said independent information on the attacks was slow getting out because ships operating in the Gulf often operate in radio silence to avoid detection.

Confirmation of the attacks on the British and Turkish vessels came after London insurance underwriters doubled war-risk coverage rates in the Gulf area.

Lloyd's announced an increase Tuesday in war risk rates on ships traveling to the area, in what a spokesman said was the largest hike since the war began. Sources at the Baltic Exchange, a

Divisions Reported Within Syrian Regime

WASHINGTON - Reagan ad- solved. ministration officials say that the Syrian government is confronted with the first open split in its ruling elite since President Hafez al-Assad took power in 1970. According to reports received by the United States and its allies, most of which have come from Western military attachés in Damascus, the split reached a high point last week, when rivals hoping to succeed the Syrian president put on competing shows of military force in the capital. There were reports of shots being fired around the presidential palace.

An anticipated shuffle of array posts has not been announced, but was announced Tuesday night that the cabinet of Prime Minister Abdul Ranof al Kasm had re-signed and that Mr. Kasm had been asked to form a new cabinet.

The chief cause of the tension, according to reports from administration officials on Tuesday and foreign diplomats, seemed to be an effort by Rifaat al-Assad, President Assad's younger brother, to position himself to succeed to the leadership despite fierce opposition from the armed forces and some ruling Ba'ath Party members. It is not clear, the diplomats said,

The military authorities also reported an upsurge in insurgent at-tacks during February, the month during which the "disengagement" took shape with the formation of a South African-Angolan commission to monitor its implementation.

The insurgents are from the So-viet-armed South-West Africa People's Organization, the most prominent group contesting South Africa's control of South-West Africa, which is widely known as Namibia. The insurgents have been fighting a guerrilla war for 18 years. The campaign against the guerrillas is being conducted by the South African Defense Force and 50,000 people had gathered by sun-set at Rizal Park. March organizers claimed twice as many were there.

The crowd included about 20,000 marchers, many of them fishermen and farmers from outlying provinces, who converged on the capital earlier in two columns, from the north and south, chanting and carrying signs denouncing the government of President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Their ranks swelled as they tramped through the city, past the U.S. Embassy and into the nearby park, where fireworks burst in the darkening skies.

Thatcher Rejects French Plan for EC

PARIS (Reuters) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has rejected a proposal by President François Mitterrand that would have adjusted British value-added tax payments into the European Community budget, French officials said Wednesday. The plan would not have revised the overall British payment.

Mrs. Thatcher also appeared to be unwilling to consider a temporary solution involving a repayment for a year or two, they said. She made her position clear when Mr. Mitterrand, presiding over the EC for the first half of this year, traveled Monday to Britain for talks that centered on the budget issue.

The officials said the British contribution was now the main obstacle to agreement at a summit meeting March 19 in Brussels on financial reform for the EC, which is near bankruptcy. Mrs. Thatcher says she will not agree to raising extra cash for the community until there is a fairer formula for calculating national payments into the budget. Britain contends that its payments to the EC widely exceed its benefits.

WASHINGTON - More than a decade ago, as college students marched and protested against the Vietnam War, a prime target of their outrage was the presence on campuses of the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

ROTC buildings were occupied, sometimes looted and burned, and the ROTC military study program, which offers financial assistance to students who promise to join the armed forces after graduation, was driven off campus at many schools. At colleges where the program survived, the number of cadets plummeted.

But today, with college tuition and housing costs rising, the ROTC is emoving new-found popularity. Indeed, as the national agony of the Vietnam years recedes, students see the ROTC as an educational and career opportunity, as well as a way to denionstrate their patriotism. I am aware of the problems in the 1960s," said Kevin Conowitch, a Navy ROTC midshipman and senior at the University of California, Los Angeles. "But that was a long time ago. We were maybe 3 or 4 years old." Captain John Fowler of the army said protesters threw stones at him when he wore his dress uniform on graduation Captain Fowler, who directs the Army ROTC program at San Jose State University in California, said: "We are at least passively accepted now. Cadets don't get the comments they used to while walking across campus.

In fact, enrollment in army, navy and air force ROTC programs in the post-Vietnam era has nearly doubled. This year, 108,210 college students are involved, compared with 59,926 in 1974. Almost three-fourths will join the army.

Applications to the U.S. military academies also are booming to record or near-record levels. The Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, the Naval Academy in Annapolis, Maryland, and the U.S. Military Academy in West Point, New York, have received more than 36,000 applications for about 4,200 openings in next fall's entering classes.

Anthony Harris, an air force cadet at the University of Southern California, said: "I was looking for an opportunity for leadership and an opportunity to get my education. They both came together in the ROTC.

Like many other cadets, Mr. Harris, 20, said that he approves of President Reagan's foreign policy. He said he is not concerned about whether he might get sent to such crisis areas as the Middle East or Central America.

"Even if I was not in ROTC and we got involved in something. I would volunteer," he said. "So it doesn't make much difference."

Senate Republican Leaders Offer Compromise on School Prayer Plan

WASHINGTON - The U.S. armed forces are readier and more capable now than they were three years ago, according to General John W. Vessey Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

General Vessey said at a press conference Tuesday that he was responding to news reports that the combat-readiness of army and air force units declined from 1980 to 1983. While acknowledging that leagues in Congress on Tuesday for Pentagon indexes show such a decline, he said the measures are "management tools" that do not reflect true military capability.
"I would tell you that we have better people, they're armed with more and better equipment, their training has been improved and they have better support behind them," General Vessey said. "And that makes for a readier force."

He added: "I'm never satisfied and comfortable with the level of readiness, but I'm a lot more satisfied and comfortable now than 1 was three years ago." Critics in Congress and even

The Killing Was in Vain

Amin Gemayel's cancellation of a security pact with Israel confirms that for the first time Israel has lost not a peace, as it contends, but a war. It was an optional war because Israel faced no mortal threat in 1982. It was a limited war because Syria, although humiliated by the Israeli air force, fought back mostly by political means. Israel's defeat is therefore far from fatal. But it was a defeat nonetheless.

Israel sacrificed hundreds of soldiers and thousands of Lebanese lives to the goal of bringing Lebanon into its political orbit and commanding it to sign a lasting peace. That signature has now been erased. The rootless peace has collapsed. The killing was in vain.

In Israel and America, too, one hears the familiar cry that politicians, not soldiers, caused the defeat. Well, of course politicians are to blame for sending soldiers on an unat-tainable mission. But the apologists for this war also complain that General Sharon should have been given time to "finish off" his enemies in Beirut ... that America, instead of brokering a cease-fire, should have intervened against Syria . . . that Israel should have borne the price of occupying Lebanon indefinitely ... that President Reagan should have helped with 10,000 marines, not a mere 1,600. But no amount of force could have redesigned Lebanon. Its feuding sects are not just quarrelsome neighbors; they are tribal ene-mies, each with its own militia, bearing the grievances of generations. The dominance of the Christians that Israel tried to restore has long since been ended by the growth of Moslem populations. And despite the divisions among them the Moslems preferred alliance with Syria, against the Israeli-blessed Chris-tians, to the figment of national independence.

Former Prime Minister Begin and General Sharon thought that by destroying the PLO they could keep the Phalangist Christians in power for another generation. They would wrest the country from Syria's influence and reward themselves with a second peace treaty. That they had miscalculated was clear in just a few days, when Bashir Gemayel, their chosen ally, balked at the demand for a full peace. His assassination, probably by Syrians, left the Israelis without even a nominal ally. Amin Gemayel may or may not be a weaker leader than his brother, but he has had to play the same weak hand against Syrian-backed Moslems. At the bidding of U.S. and Saudi diplomats he finally signed the security pact that gave Israel an illusion of accomplishment. But Israel tired of keeping troops around to support that illusion, and Syria, waiting patiently, has now been able to puncture it. Syria well knows that it lost the military battle to Israel. Israel now knows that it does not want to pay the price of fighting Syria for only diplomatic gain. So the two are effectively deterred and bound to find a tacit equilibrium in Lebanon, as they have in the Golan region.

Such a standoff often leads to a highly productive diplomacy. But first the political systems of the region must adjust to the new condition and throw up leaders who will read it creatively. Leaders who fight a bad war are unlikely to make a good peace.

About Taxing Oil Imports

Energy is too cheap for America's own good. Senator Gary Hart is quite right about that. But he has the wrong remedy. Some time ago, in a proposal to reduce dependence on oil from the Gulf region, he suggested a tax of $10 a barrel on imported oil. Now the idea has reappeared in the debates among the Democrats running for the presidential nomination. A few days ago Walter Mondale said it "may be the worst idea in the campaign." No. it is certainly not that. But it needs work. The trouble with an import tax is that the price of imported oil sets the price for all domestic American oil. The first effect of a $10 tax on a barrel of Gulf oil would be a price increase of $10 on all the other barrels from Texas and California and so forth. The tax on the imports would raise about $18 billion a year, but the increase in cost to the consumer would be in the range of $60 billion - more than two-thirds of it going to the domestic oilproducing industry, a business that is already more than adequately profitable.

But Mr. Hart is on the right track. The real price of crude oil, taking inflation into account, has fallen about one-third in the United States since its peak in March 1981. As oil gets cheaper, people are using more of it. Oil consumption is now rising again for the first time since 1978. Because America's oil fields produce continuously at full capacity, the increase in consumption falls entirely on imports; and because most of the world's unused capacity is in the Gulf region, it falls disproportionately on Gulf producers. That would be a reason for concern even if there were not a war there.

The sensible answer is a tax, but it needs to have the least possible effect on industry and obs. How about a tax on gasoline?

Three years ago the price of a gailon of Three years ago the price of a gailon of unleaded regular gasoline was, translated into today's dollars, $1.62. Currently the same gallon goes for about $1.22. Since each penny on a gallon of gas raises $1 billion in federal revenue, six ply re-establishing that 1981 price would bring in $40 billion a year. Can consumers afford to pay it? Yes, because, in fact, they did. It would cost the public far less than the $10-a-barret tax on imports, but raise twice as much revenue. It would be a serious and subworst idea of the campaign? Far from it.

much revenue. It would be a serious and substantial down payment on the Reagan deficit, unlike the one that Mr. Reagan is talking about. It would support the endangered trends toward small cars and fuel conservation. The Kissinger's Bolt From the Blue forces an opponent which has only two-thirds generated some alarm in European capitals. The outgoing NATO secretary-general, Dr. Joseph Luns, has described Dr. Kissinger's words as "a bolt from the blue." There is a sense of shock that the supposedly Eurocentric Kissinger should want to rock the boat.

In fact. Dr. Kissinger's remarks are not at all out of character. He has for years been anxious about the credibility of NATO's central doctrine of flexible response, at times quite explicitly so. He is possessed of a restless intellect which is challenged rather than dismayed by bureaucratic ngidities. Above all, Dr. Kissinger hopes to be invited to serve as secretary of state in a second-term Reagan administration.

Neither is the Kissinger thesis quite as dramatic as it has been made out to be. He does not suggest that NATO is in imminent danger of disintegration. His theme is that the alliance is manifesting a number of unhealthy symptoms which largely stem from a 35-year-old institutional settlement which no longer corresponds to political or economic reality. In particular, he ascribes the fractiousness between Europeans and Americans to Europe's "junior partner" role, which robs it of both self-respect and a proper sense of responsibility for its own defense.

The other flaw in NATO which concerns Dr. Kissinger is the paradox of European governments which are increasingly queasy (rightly so) about relying upon the early use of nuclear weapons to repel a Warsaw Pact invasion but unwilling to match with conventional

The Philippines and America

Considering the immense value of the Philippine-American security alliance to the security of the Pacific region, it would be tragic if esident Ferdinand Marcos were to talk himself into a corner on the question of letting American bases remain on Philippine soil.

Of course he is having a hard time on the diplomatic front. First President Ronald Reagan decided not to visit. Now the Foreign Affairs Committee of the U.S. House of Representatives wants to cut military aid to make the Marcos government concentrate on solving severe financial and economic problems, reduce alleged human rights abuses and re-store democracy. It was a natural reaction for Mr. Marcos to tell the Philippine Military Academy: "Our freedom as people and our sovereignty are much too precious to be entrusted to friends." But it amounts to saying that he is prepared to kick out U.S. forces and scrap the two countries' historic security alliance. Nations that wish the Philippines well can only hope that the president would find it possible to speak with greater moderation.

Moscow Ought to Sidestep This Obsession

B ERLIN—Andrei Sinyavksy, the Soviet dissident writer, asserted in a recent interview that the Russian exile community in the West is dominated by the nationalist and nativist views of another distinguished writer in exile, Alexander Solzhenitsyn. These views have profound roots in Russian civilization, which has always been torn between "Westernizers," drawn to liberal West European ideas, and others who are convinced that Russia is a unique civilization endangered by liberal ideas and having a saving mission of its own to the rest of the world.

Mr. Solzhenitsyn believes that the West is responsible for the ideas and movements which destroyed holy Russia. He thinks that the West is itself sick, riddled with false ideas and selfindulgence. And, according to Mr. Sinyavsky, he believes that the West is also filled with fear and hatred for the Russian people.

Mr. Sinyavsky concludes: "For decades the Soviet Communist Party has been telling the Russian people that the imperialist world wants to destroy them. Now the ordinary Russian hears Solzhenitsyn on Western radio stations confirm-ing this idea. It is pregnant with the idea of war."

This is a warning which Soviet specialists in touch with the West have been giving for some time: that Russian history, and particularly the experience of World War II, has produced deepseated fears and patterns of behavior among both the Russian people and Soviet elites which have been reawakened by the recent policies of the U.S. government and by the language Washington has recently employed.

Things have been said in Washington that seem to deny to the Soviet Union a legitimate most vulnerable on issues of irresponsibility in role in the affairs of the world. Behind this, his approach to the Soviet Union, over-reliance

Russian elites believe they see a denial of the legitimacy of the Soviet state itself, even of its right to exist. "You think that only you exist," says one such Russian, who knows the United States well. "You are determined to coerce us to behave how you want us to behave. Well, we will not submit. Russians are your equals."

This is far from the confident "we will bury you" which Americans have been led to expect from Moscow. It is an expression of determination, but also of apprehension, pessimism, even of resignation and fear. For if there is to be deepened conflict between the two countries, a very bleak future is implied for Russia.

Bad as the Soviet Union's civilian economy is today, poor as Russian living conditions are by comparison with even Eastern Europe, these would become worse in a new and prolonged cold war. And there seems nothing the Soviets can do. Desperate as they may become, even aggressive war can promise no solution.

But it is an important truth that nations should not be pushed against locked doors. There are some in the United States who do think that the West is in a position to break the Soviet Union, and should try to do so. But this is not the policy of the present government in Washington. It will not be the policy of a second Reagan administra-tion, should Mr. Reagan be re-elected.

on military force and an over-ideological inter-pretation of such affairs as Lebanon. He has recently moderated his positions accordingly.

In short, this too will pass. But there is something to be said to Soviet leaders. They hold levers able to change their situation. They are responsible for their plight, and they can ease it. Let them break off the dialogue with Washing-ton, if they like. The world is not totally made up of Russia and the United States. The Soviet Union could make an immense difference in its own, and the international, situa-tion by ending the war in Afghanistan. It does not need the United States for that. It needs Pakistan, first of all. Pakistan would certainly supply political and security guarantees neces-sary to a neutralization of Afghanistan under a leadership acceptable to the Afghan people. The Soviet government could offer the West European powers new and serious proposals for cing the levels of both nuclear and conventional forces in Central Europe. It could seek from the Europeans a new way to guarantee Russia's own security, substituting political guarantees for the sterile military confrontation that now exists. If Moscow could find agreement with the West Europeans, Washington would have little choice but to acquiesce.

But Moscow is as obsessed with America as the Reagan administration is obsessed with inter-national communism. Moscow finds in this rival-ry confirmation of its own rank, assurance of its own significance. The world would be a better place without these obsessions, but can Russians. or Americans, escape their grip?

Awaiting The Real Mondale

By Meg Greenfield

W ASHINGTON — Everyone is offering Walter Mondale advice. I don't know about him, but I've good to me. The problem is that none of this advice is likely to cure what is really ailing the Mondale campaign. It seems to me that Mondale as a campaigner has several built-in debilities and that he will either win in soits of them or not at all.

spite of them or not at all.

The first of these puts me in mind The first of these puts me in mind of Hubert Humphrey. I know this is a hopelessly "in-sy" Washington observation, but not since Mr. Humphrey, in my judgment, has there been a public figure whose private, one-on-one or small-group personality was more startlingly different from the first that is proceed on from the fud that is projected on television. It doesn't even need to be television. Put the man behind a podium looking out on several hundred folks in the great hall of some local organization or other, and there you have it again: pure fud.

I do not know why this is true of Mr. Mondale, any more than I could ever figure it out in the case of Mr. Humphrey. You don't have to think that Mr. Mondale should be presi-dent or that his programs and ideas are the best in the world to know something else about him: Like Mr. Humphrey as an individual, the actual Mondale is lively, funny, sharp, smart as hell and a good guy — and he is apparently unable to convey as much on the campaign trail.

Like Mr. Humphrey he comes on, or at least translates somehow, as irredeemably goody-goody and dull. This happened to Mr. Mondale when he made a pass at running be-fore. I recall the time when he went to

New York to address Americans for Democratic Action. If ever there was a match of man to audience, that was surely it. He bombed. He was dull. He isn't dull. But his public persona much of the time is.

I say much of the time, because it is of course true that, like Mr. Humphrey also, there are occasions on which Mr. Mondale can ignite an audience, bringing it to explosive life. But we aren't seeing many of those, and for this there seems to me to be a reason: the circumstances—even the particular "blessings"— of Mr. Mondale's campaign status so far this year are of a kind guaranteed to make his built-in debilities worse.

All that endorsement and first-inthe-class status has done two things.
It has given him a motive — protecting his lead, not rocking the boat for not trying to liven things up, and it has lent his already pronounced tendency to look fuddish on the campaign frail an aspect of smugness,

We all react viscerally and misernies competing in the global market. ably when confronted with the teacher's pet, Little Rollo, one among us who seems to have an unfair advantage and to be admired and promoted and specially treated by the authorities against whom the rest of us are in more or less perpetual spitball-pitching rebellion. Mr. Mondale, a man whose true nature is nothing like this, nonetheless has managed to date to convey it almost unbearably

I am not sure that with all the best advice in the world Mr. Mondale can overcome the effects of this. Television campaigning and the lickle, of-ten idiotic attentions of the several thousand (or is it million) media camp followers who go from caucus to caucus and trend to trend may just be too much for his candidacy.

And as a one-time vice president he is also subject to the great cam-paign whiplash that one-time vice presidents must endure. First he will be compelled - in the name of being his own man — to show he was different from or at odds with his president. Next, if he does this, he will be seen as two-faced, weak, self-serving.

I am not asking you to shed tears for Mr. Mondale. He is the one who has to redeem his campaign, if it can be done. And it will surely never be done if he comes on now as the disappointed teacher's pet, the angry, they-nad-no-right-to-do-this-to-me lad who points out (tattles on) the other kids' misconduct. No, the question is whether Mr. Mondale can manage now, at this late date, to convey his authentic self to the voters.

Is he constitutionally able to do it? And if he is, is he willing to take a chance on himsel?

1909: Italian Voters Shun Change PARIS - The result of the general Parliamentary Elections in Italy may be summed up in two words: beati possedentes. The party in power has won all along the line. Shortly after the closing of the polls, the victory of 340 Ministerialists out of a Chamber of 508 Deputies was announced, so that Signor Giolitti is already assured of a majority of 182. The tendency of the voting was toward the Left, the Socialist element returning to the Montecitorio in increased strength. HAMBURG — An old dream came true late last year for many West Germans when one o their compatriots, the physicist Ulf Merbold, took part in a flight of the U.S. space shuttle Columbia. But West German participation in the 10-day flight seems to me to have been a largely futile and unnecessarily costly exercise. Excitement was understandable. given traditional German interest in sophisticated technology. Her-mann Oberth promoted the concept of a space shuttle in the 1920s. Wernher von Braun introduced ballistic missiles to the Nazis, and his Saturn-5 rocket later helped send American astronauts to the moon.

But a drawback to Mr. Merbold's voyage was the price tag. West German taxpayers picked up roughly half the SI-billion bill that the European Space Agency paid to have its reusable Spacelab carried into orbit by the shuttle.

The bill, the result of an agree ment concluded with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration a decade ago, included training for Mr. Merbold and several other West Europeans. The agreement was badly negotiated by the Euro-peans, who gave Spacelab away after the flight - probably one of the most expensive gifts ever re-ceived by the United States. By Gunter Haaf

Meanwhile, no other European has been scheduled to take part in any upcoming shuttle flight. Supporters of West Germany's commitment to space are unruffled. In their view the logical next step is West European involvement with the United States in a manned space station, and they are ready to invest heavily in the program.

But there is a serious question whether there is a scientific, technological or economic need to send humans into space. From the start the decision to launch Spacelab was essentially political. Many of its experiments became obsolete because of delays, and dealing with the U.S and European space bureaucracies sapped the energy of the techni-cians on the project.

Nicaragua Rebels Said to Improve Skills coordinator of the governing junta, and Foreign Minister Miguel d'Es-coto Brockmann, have publicly asserted that the attacks reflect decisions by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency and the Honduran government to provide more direct support to the rebels.

Before dawn Monday, according to a Nicaraguan communiqué, three soldiers were killed and three wounded when their patrol boat was attacked near Honduras in the Gulf of Fonseca. A Nicaraguan military officer said that the boat and two others near it were first shot at from a passing launch and then attacked by airplanes that ap-peared to have flown from the di-that rebels had, fo

Insurgents reportedly also killed 14 Nicaraguan militiamen early Saturday in a mortar attack on the border village of Waspan. A spokesman for the Nicaraguan army, Lieutenant Commander Roberto Sanchez, said that the mortars had been fired from inside Honduras and that the episode marked "the first time our territory has come under sustained mortar attack from Honduras."

Waspan, which was evacuated by the government a year ago and is now populated only by soldiers, is a few hundred yards from the Commander Sånchez also said that rebels had, for the first time, inside Nicaraguan territory. He said that at least half of the casualties in the weekend attack on Waspan were caused by mines,

He said that these attacks had been carried out by commando units that had been newly trained by the CIA and that included Americans and Argentines as well as Nicaraguans. He said that his information came from Nicaraguan intelligence reports "that I know it to be true but I cannot give you absolute proof."

Mr. Ortega said the mines were an advanced type not yet available to Latin American armed forces. On Feb. 25, two fishing vessels sank after apparently hitting mines near Bluefields, the largest town on Nicaragua's Caribbean coast. Two more vessels were reportedly damaged, two crewmen were lost and seven others wounded. A week after the incident, the Revolutionary Democratic Alli-ance, a guerrilla organization led by the former Sandinist hero Eden Pastora Gomez, announced that it was planting mines around the country's principal Pacific port, Nicaraguan officials said they had information indicating that these actions were carried out by mixed commando teams trained by the CIA at a base in Honduras.

"The CIA brought in outsiders to join with those Nicaragnans who qualified," a senior Sandinist officer said. He said the teams included Argentines and Cuban-Americans.

Mr. d'Escoto said in a protes sent to his Honduran counterpart that during the weekend mortar attacks on Waspan and nearby areas, Honduran soldiers were in "open collaboration" with insurgents.

Salvadoran Rebels Kill 4 in Attacks In Central Region

SAN SALVADOR - Two civil defensemen and two workers of the Salvadoran Red Cross were killed in attacks on three towns in the central province of San Vicente, officials said.

The attacks took place Tuesday in the towns of Verapaz, Guada-lupe and San Emigdio. Officials of the 5th Infantry Brigade in San Vicente, the provincial capital 25 miles (40 kilometers) east of San Salvador, said two members of the local civil defense forces died in the clashes there.

In addition, a funeral home director in San Vicente said he had received the bodies of two Red Cross workers. An officer of the 5th Infantry Brigade said a Red Cross ambulance had been sprayed by rebel machine-gun fire in Guadalupe.

The attacks came amid a 5,000man sweep by government troops to prevent rebels from regaining a foothold in the province, which was cleared of insurgents last June in preparation for a pacification program that had been carried out with U.S. aid.

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Navy was willing to lend Britain an aircraft carrier during its 1982 war to retake the Falkland Islands from Argentina if the Royal Navy lost rither of its two carriers. Defense Department officials have said.

Although an offer to use the amphibious assault ship Guarn was not made because the need did not arise, officials said such discussions took place as part of a large-scale effort to try to ensure that Britain's 100-ship armada did not meet defeat 8,000 miles (almost 13,000 kilometers) from home.

Pentagon officials were asked Tuesday about the U.S. role in the Falklands crisis, which began with the Argentine seizure of the islands on April 2 and ended June 14 after the British recaptured them. The questions followed a report on U.S. help that appeared Friday in the British magazine The Economist.

The magazine said the Falklands campaign "could not have been mounted, let alone won, without American help."

Pentagon officials confirmed many details in the report, including the fact that the United States repositioned a spy satellite from its Soviet-watching orbit in the Northern Hemisphere to a place over the South Atlantic where it could pro-vide intelligence to the British fleet.

The officials said U.S. intelligence information probably made the difference between winning and losing for Britain.

Pentagon officials spoke of extraordinary coordination between the U.S. and British services. New York Times Service N EW YORK — Researchers know that sexual fantasies tell much about one's sexuality, but just how much they tell has been debated for decades. The most recent evidence sheds light on several important aspects of the issue: what the fantasies say about one's sexual orientation. what the most common fantasies are, when they are healthy and when pathological, and what they indicate about a couple's relationship.

The latest contribution to the issue is from the Masters and Johnson Institute in a recent article on their treatment program for dissatisfied homosexuals. Researchers at the institute believe that whether a person has homosexual fantasies or heterosexual ones cannot be used as an indication of actual sexual preference. They cite evidence showing the frequency of homosesand vice versa.

"For most people who have a fantasy of rape." Dr. Barlow said. "it's a very idealized, even romantic act, something like the rape scene research, we find that if you play a tape for them of a realistic descriplike that may be more symbolic than real: for many women who have guilt about sex, it can be a way of giving themselves permission to enjoy it.

"But if, say, a man has to have a fantasy of severe sadism before he can be aroused at all, then it's a it of compulsive, obligatory fanta-sies are more likely to lead to someone trying to act them out. And that can mean trouble, depending on a variety of circumstances."

"Fantasy patterns." Dr. Barlow said, "are a primary indicator of a person's sexual orientation." He thus places himself in the school of thinking that assumes that a preponderance of, say, homosexual fantasies is a prime indication that a person wishes to be homosexual or is one.

However, that view is at odds with the recent report from the Masters and Johnson Institute. Dr. Schwartz and Dr. Masters argue that having a certain fantasy even with some frequency — does not define a person's sexual orientation: for example, having homoa person is homosexual.

Instead, they argue, a person's stated sexual preference matters more. Thus, even if a person had homosexual experiences in the past and fantasized about them, but that, for such a person, it would be appropriate to use sex therapy to terns to fit his preference.

New Agent Is Used to Dissolve Clots

BALTIMORE (UPI) - Researchers say a new serum that may someday be used by paramedics to stop heart attacks could be ready for use on the general public in two years.

Scientists at Johns Hopkins University said Tuesday that the genetically engineered human protein has been used on three patients in recent weeks. The scientists said the new agent safely dissolves blood clots, which form in the coronary arteries of up to 90 percent of the 1 million heart attack victims in the United States each year.

"We think this is an exciting new agent for which there is data showing it is the most effective and safe in dissolving blood clots," said Dr. Myron Weisfeldt, director of cardiology at Johns Hopkins and City hospitals.

The new agent, approved by the Food and Drug Administration two weeks ago for investigative use, is being used in concurrent experiments at Johns Hopkins, Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston and at Washington University in St. Louis. Missouri.

In one type of strabismus, the inner eye muscles are contracted more than the outer ones. Children often require corrective surgery to realign their eyes. But Dr. Buckley treats the children by injecting tiny amounts of the botulinum toxin into the overcontracted inner eye muscles. The toxin paralyzes the muscle and prevents transmission of messages from nerves to muscles. The weaker outer muscles can more easily contract and pull the eyes into proper alignment.

WALL STREET WATCH

Analyst Sees New Problems Gives Rate For Reagan in Hart's Rise

By EDWARD ROHRBACH

Internutional Herald Tribune s if Wall Street did not already have enough of a stew to worry over this year — the heating economy, bubbling interest rates — there is also a presidential election, and

Two months ago, Jeffrey M. Applegate, a political economist for E.F. Hutton based in Washington, said the financial communication. nity's "overwhelming consensus" was that Ronald Reagan would he re-elected and that this was "already in the stock market."

But now Mr. Applegate contends that sentiment toward a Reagan victory is ebbing from Wall Street, and not just because stock prices have tumbled since then. "I see concern in the market that Mr. Reagan is doing so little about the budget deficit. People in the financial community

Additionally, here is the "rocketing" emergence of Gary Hart, who Mr. Applegate says must be considered the new front-runner for the Democratic nomination after his victories in primaries and caucuses in New Hampshire, Maine and Vermont "Senator Hart is a different kind of Democrat than Walter Mondale, one that is a much more formidable opponent for President Reagan." The Hutton specialist said Mr. Hart's "neoliberal" stance means that he is right of center on economic and defense issues— two areas that count most on Wall Street—and left of center on social and foreign policy matters.

Mr. Applegate, noting that the Colorado senator has been elected twice in a conservative state, asserted that Mr. Hart "can hit the president where it hurts." He can do that, Mr. Applegate said, by promising to slow the rate of military spending by about $100 billion over the next five years and help lower interest rates as the budget deficit declines, Wall Street, like much of the country, is just beginning to analyze Senator Hart "after its visceral negative reaction because he's a Democrat," Mr. Applegate said. While Mr. Mondale could be dismissed as representing the traditional party preference for employment incentives over worry about inflation, Mr. Hart will provide the financial community with "more positives" to consider.

"Gary Hart wants the marketplace to pick the winners from the losers, not the government," Mr. Applegate said, noting the candidate's opposition to loan guarantees for Chrysler. He is also against trade protectionism.

To summarize the difference between the two Democrats, I'd say Mondale is for wealth redistribution while Hart stands for wealth creation, and that's an idea always warm to Wall Street.' Whoever the Democrats nominate, however, Mr. Applegate's "gut feeling" is that Mr. Reagan will be returned to office. On the

Volcker Warning

WASHINGTON - Paul A. Volcker, the Federal Reserve Board chairman, warned savings and loan executives Wednesday they face imminent danger if federal deficits drive up interest rates. But he called the economy "very strong" in many respects. Mr. Volcker spoke briefly to a convention of the National League of Savings Institutions, telling the thrift executives, "Yours is an industry at the break-even point or a little better."

If interest rates go up, he said, "The improvement that has been made evaporates rather quickly." "There can't be any question that given all the other developments, whatever they may be and of course the economy looks very strong in a number of directions - the deficits that we face put pressures on in only one direction."

Oddly, Mr. Volcker's reference to a strong economy was sour news for analysts on Wall Street, who have seen stock prices driven down by waves of pessisim. If Mr. Volcker believes the economy is strong, their reasoning goes, it could mean increased competition for credit and higher interest rates.

in general, however, Mr. Volcker's warnings about the dan-gers of high deficits were more subdued than in recent speeches, one of which was blamed for a 23-point plunge in the Dow Jones industrial ачетаре.

The thrift industry executives Tuesday passed a unanimous resolution that anticipated many of Mr. Volcker's concerns, calling for im-mediate action to cut the fiscal

He noted Americans' savings practices have not changed much in the past several years and said, "I don't think there is any particular reason to think that there is going to be striking change over the years immediately ahead in the savings rate of the economy.

Offer Marks Course Shift for Socal

Firm Reduces Its Emphasis On Exploration

By Thomas C. Hayes New York Times Service SAN FRANCISCO - Three years ago. George M. Keller put Wall Street on notice that Stan-dard Oil Co. of California would not step into the multibilliondollar bidding fracas among major oil companies."because we can find reserves cheaper ourselves."

Certainly. Standard of California, the sixth-largest oil com-pany in the United States, with $28.4 billion in sales last year. has been considered a heavyspending oil prospector. It had invested $3.3 billion in exploration last year, including its leading stake in the promising Santa Maria Basin off the coast of Southern California.

But Mr. Keller and his colleagues at Socal, as the company is commonly known, clearly became convinced that there was a price at which wading into the nigh-stakes takeover wars became irresistible. And Monday, Gulf Corp. accepted Socal's offer to buy Gulf in what would be the biggest price ever paid in a corporate acquisition, a mini-mum of $13.2 billion.

Since Gulf has also granted Socal an option to buy 30.5 million treasury shares at $80 a share, the total value of the transaction could be as much as $13.4 billion. The option arrangement is seen as giving Socal more power to battle any rival takeover bids for Gulf.

Industry analysts say that Socal began to see the logic of finding reserves through acquisition, instead of drilling, earlier this year when Texaco Inc. bought Getry Oil Co. for $10.2 billion in what was then the biggest corporate takeover.

"I detected some wistful feelings among their people that they hadn't moved more quickly on Getty." said Herbert A. Hari. an oil-industry analyst with Rowe & Pittman, a brokerage bouse here. "They learned that sometimes you can buy reserves for less on Wall Street."

Rosario Ilacqua, an analyst with L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg, Towbin in Manhattan, said that Socal's interest in Gulf had also been fueled by a desire to at least retain, if not better, its stature among the industry's giants. "Whether or not you make money on a merger this big is always debatable. Mr. Ilacqua said. "But you also want to protect your position in the industry."

Mr. Keller, who is 60 years old and in his third year as Socal's chairman and chief executive. could not be reached for comment. He was en route here from Pittsburgh Tuesday after wrap-ping up negotiations with Gulf's chairman, James E. Lee, which began with a phone call from Mr. Lee "in late February." according to Guy M. Carruthers, a So-

Mr. Carruthers said that Socal's cost of buying Gulf's 1.2 billion barrels in global oil re-serves, between S5 and S10 a barrel after taxes, is roughly equivalent to the $10 to $15 a barrel that Socal now typically spends, before taxes, developing

He added that federal restrictions on new drilling sites also made the acquisition appealing. "It's not just getting access to reserves but getting access to the land for exploration that has become a problem," he said.

Socal has been something of an exploration pioneer. It was the first company to strike oil in Saudi Arabia, in 1938, the first to be successful in the Hibernia field east of Canada and, three years ago, it brought in the first three wildcat wells in the Santa Maria Basin, off the coast of Santa Barbara and 100 miles (160 kilometers) north of Los Angeles.

The company, operating under the name Chevron, has also been the leading gasoline marketer in the western United States, with strength also in the Southeast. The Chevron-Gulf combination would create the largest gasoline retailer in the United States, according to Dan Lundberg, publisher of an oil and gas newsletter. It would have operations in every state but North Dakota and Wisconsin, and 10.2 percent of the total U.S. gasoline market.

All this, of course, assumes the blessing of the Federal Trade Commission. And already industry analysts are saying that several of Gulf's service stations in the Southeast, where existing retailing operations of the merger partners overlap, probably will

Gulf Pact Spurs Merger Wave's Foes in Congress

WASHINGTON - The agree ment under which Standard Oil Co. of California is to buy Gulf Corp. has touched off fresh congressional efforts to curb or prohibit such

"It is our intention to stop them dead in their tracks — Pickens. Socal. everybody." J. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana, the ranking Democrat on the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee. said in an interview.

"It seems to me decidedly not in the public interest to use up the nation's credit to create windfall profits and thereby divert funds from more useful endeavors such as drilling for more oil."

Mr. Johnston said he had directed his staff to draft an amendment that would prohibit the Gulf-Socal merger and mergers of other big oil companies, perhaps for six months. He said it would be offered on the Senate floor, perhaps with the reauthorization of the Federal Trade Commission, probably later this month.

Last week, Mr. Johnston unsuccessfully offered an amendment to the Export Administration Act that sought to discourage oil company consolidations by making merged companies ineligible for federal drilling leases. The amendment Analysts also expressed fears that the Federal Trade Commission, which as expected said Tues- trusts at target companies would day that it would conduct an antitrust review, would object to the agreement or drive an exceedingly hard bargain in approving it.

Although there was little immediate official reaction to the Gulf-Socal proposal, which would set a record in dollar terms, it was thought sikely that the accord would give new impetus to a bill sponsored by Representative Peter W. Rodino Jr. of New Jersey and

This measure would give the government the power to withhold ap-proval of any combination in which the acquiring company's assets would reach $5 billion and the number of its employees 25,000. A "public interest" standard would be created against which to measure the transaction's economic

Mr. Johnston said he was more worried about the amount of capital required to finance oil-company acquisitions and the possible "liquidation" of properties than he was about the industry's growing concentration. "It is not concentration per se that we're after." Mr. Johnston said. "Somewhere along the line you do get excessive concentration, but you're using up all this capital and all this effort to acquire one

Some people, however, deny that capital is consumed when a merger takes place. Unsuccessful bidders, they say, never have to draw down their credit lines, while the money paid out in agreements that are completed always winds up back in somebody's bank account. Mr. Johnston said he stood "in admiration" of T. Boone Pickens, chairman of Mesa Petroleum and an early bidder for Gulf, for his ability to profit from the takeover business, But, he said, Mr. Pickens's plans for creating royalty

Sonesson to Buy Stake in Gambro, Cooperate on Research, Marketing

By Juris Kaza International Herald Tribuni

STOCKHOLM -- Sonesson AB. the Swedish light-industry group, said Wednesday that it plans to buy 1.1 million shares of Gambro, the medical-equipment company specializing in dialysis and blood treatment

It also said the companies plan to cooperate in research and international marketing in the pharmaceutical and health-care fields.

The agreement, which Gambro valued at 330 million kronor ($43.2 million) involves a transfer of 500,000 Class A shares and 500,000 Class B shares, giving Sonesson 23.6 percent of the votes in Gamhro and 8.4 percent of the share capital. The shares are being sold by the Crawfoord family and a family foundation. B shares curry diminished voting rights and may be owned by non-Swedes.

Sonesson, which is owned by Volvo, is also taking an option to buy an additional 200,000 Class A shares, which would bring its voting influence in Gambro to 30,9 percent.

Analysts said Sonesson's action was part of a policy to expand the company's involvement in the pharmaceutical and health-care sector. Last year. Somesson took a majority stake in Leo AB, which makes a broad range of drugs including antibiotics, headache remedies and cancer treatments. Somesson has also bought into Ferrosan, figures released Wednesday.

Fujitsu Increases Stake in Amdahl

Fujitsu also purchased warrants for an additional 2.5 million Amdahl shares at $20.50 each. The warrants permit the holder to buy the shares at $2,50 each. .

Texaco Clears Bass Buyout

WHITE WHITES, N.Y. -Texaco Inc. reported Wednesday that its board had unanimously approved the purchase of 25.6 million of its own shares from Bass Brothers Enterprises Inc. in a transaction valued at more than $1.25 billion.

The company said it would pay $50 a share in cash for more than 13 million shares and acquire the remainder in exchange for adjustable-rate pre-ferred stock having a stated value of S50 a share.

The Bass group acquired some of its Texaco shares 18 months ago and made additional purchases when Texaco aunched its bid to take over Getty Oil Co. earlier this year. There had been speculation that Bass Brothers was trying to assemble a takeover bid for Texaco.

FTC to Fight Warner Link To Polygram

WASHINGTON - The U.S. government has decided to go to court to block the merger of Warner records and Polygram, a venture that would create the world's largest record company and a possible monopoly in part of the music industry.

The Federal Trade Commission said Tuesday that it plans to file a complaint in U.S. District Court in California asking for a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction to halt the merger, set to take effect after March 12.

"The proposed joint venture between Warner and Polygram records to merge their prerecorded music divisions would substantially lessen competition in the record and tape division of the music in-dustry," the FTC said.

Warner called the FTC's decision "surprising and disappoint-ing" and said the company would fight it in court.

The agency pointed out that Warner, the second-largest U.S. record company, and Polygram, the sixth-largest, are among six companies that dominate the prerecorded music business.

The merger would make Warner-Polygram the largest distributor of prerecorded music in the world, controlling 26 percent of the U.S. market.

"When the six are shrunk to five, there is an opportunity for tacit or overt collusion to control pricing" in sales and the number of new records released, said Charles James, an FTC attorney.

He said that although there now are some independent operators at certain levels of the record business, only six companies perform all functions: seeking out artists. Sumitomo Chemical Co. may be making the recordings, manufac-able to resume dividend payments turing tapes and records, distributing the music, promoting it and selling records and tapes through retail outlets and record clubs.

Warner officials said the merger cial year that ended in December is necessary to save Polygram, whose domestic sales are lagging. and create economies of scale that will help both companies counter-act the effect of lost sales resulting billion yen for 1983, reversing a 7.22-billion-yen loss in 1982. from home taping.

Mr. Carruthers said "it is possible that" Socal will sell Gulf's 60percent interest in Gulf Canada, but he declined to identify other expected sales of Gulf assets or acknowledge that any were being considered.

T. Boone Pickens Jr., the chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co. and leader of an investment group that had hoped to acquire Gulf, had said he could raise about $6 billion in cash by selling all of Gulf's assets except its domestic reserves.

But one analyst, who asked not to be identified, said a large-scale selloff might be difficult for any company, including Socal, to carry off because refining and chemical markets were now depressed and buyers could be hard to find.

The Gulf acquisition, if it clears federal regulatory hurdles, would nearly double Socal's existing reserves but would still do little to alter its reputation as the most international of the international oil companies. Of Socal's 1.6 billion barrels of reserves, for instance, 72 percent are in the United States. compared with 74 percent for Gulf's 1.2 billion barrels.

Financially, Socal appears to have enough muscle to handle the $12.4 billion in debt that it will

Mr. Matsunami said the revision should affect imports of 1985 models if applications are begun now. Under the new system, he said, the much-criticized practice of vehicleby-vehicle inspection will be scrapped, and replaced by inspec-tion of a test vehicle for each model

Foreign Bankers Fear A U.S. Capital Standard

By Nancy L Ross

WASHINGTON - Foreign bankers meeting here have ex-pressed concern over what they consider to be a threat by the Unit-ed States to impose capital standards on banks beyond its borders. The conference's chairman, Serge Bellanger, the U.S. represen-tative of the French bank Credit Industriel et Commercial, singled national companies on the basis of worldwide profits as the most sen-sitive ones facing foreign bankers in the United States.

Also of concern is a pending Senate bill requiring equal treatment of banks can expand operations here, constitute U.S. discrimination against you," Mr. Reuss said.

Last June, the Federal Reserve said that U.S. multinational banking organizations should have capital equivalent to at least 5 percent of their total assets.

A LATE DIVORCE

By A.B. Yehoshua. Translated by Hillet Halkin, 354 pp. $16.95. Doubleday, 245 Park Ave., New York, N.Y.

Reviewed by M.S. Kaplan

OVER the last 14 years, the Israeli writer A. B. Yeboshua has been sitting at his typewriter on Mount Carmel overlooking Hai-fa Bay, the Lebanese border at his back, and chronicing the lives of his countrymen from their psychological interiors. Israel's six wars in its brief 35-year history, its chaotic economy, its shifting borders have exacted their toll. The turbulence in which Yehoshua's characters find themselves has snapped all the traditional moorings that serve to steady lives and give meaning to experience, especially the twin anchors of religion and nationalism. A typical Yehoshua character lives in an emotional air lock, searching for a way to join the mainstream of an orderly existence.

In his new novel, "A Late Divorce," it is now the bonds of family that have been loosened. leaving its members spinning with aimless urgency, despairing of some idea or ideal about which to establish an orbit and restore balance.

The story, which takes place in the nine days before the Passover holiday, concerns the pa-triarch of the Kaminka family. Yehuda Kaminks, who has returned to Israel from the United States to finalize a divorce with his wife, Naomi, Before her husband's flight from family and country, Naomi had entered a peri-od of encroaching madness that culminated in an attempt on Yehuda's life and caused her subsequent hospitalization. Now Yehuda has returned with an unexpected spring in his step, wearing stylish clothes. He has undergone a rejuvenation in his adopted country, having acquired not only a new land but a new lover. The hidden purpose of the divorce, we discover, is so that Yehuda can remarry and have his already conceived child bear his name.

Yehoshua tells this story with characteristic energy and inventiveness. Much of the book's suspense revolves around whether Yehuda's wife will grant him the divorce and under what conditions. But it is in the depiction of his characters' lives that Yehoshua's power as a novelist is most apparent. Each chapter is narrated by a different member of the Kaminka family, guiding the reader through the churn-ing feelings of resentment and anger triggered by the father's return. In the course of the nine days, they all have their say: Yehuda Kaminka himself, his daughter and her husband, his oldest son and his homosexual lover, his youngest son and his wife, his 7-year-old grandson. and his schizophrenic wife. And as we come to know all of these characters through their own thoughts, as well as through each other's eyes, a strife-ridden family portrait emerges.

"A Late Divorce" incorporates many of the themes and imagery found in Yehoshua's short stories and previous novel ("The Lover"), such as the disintegration of time, and Israel's ominous and punishing landscape. In his earlier

Avraham B. Yehoshua

works, Israel's war-scarred history has provided the backdrop against which his characters' personal conflict or existential condition is exposed and examined.

But the setting for "A Late Divorce" is far from the bullets and bombs of the front line. and the mention of battle makes its way into the conversation only incidentally. It is as if the topic has lost its value as a subject for discussion, or even meditation. But what has impregnated every detail of these Israelis' lives is the terrible weariness and disillusionment these wars have spawned.

It is no accident that Yeboshua has the old-father narrate the final chapter of this disturb-ing and provocative book on the first day of the Passover festival, the Jewish celebration of the Israelites' exodus from Egypt. Wandering the desert for 40 years, the tribe had to wait until the generation born in slavery died out before being able to enter the Promised Land as a truly free people. In a sense, this is the dilemma in which Israel finds itself today. Yehoshua is suggesting that many of the values and experiences of its previous generation — Israel's founding fathers — are no longer serviceable founding fathers — are no longer serviceable to the new generation as a response to the life threatening realities of the present day. threatening realities of the present day.
"A Late Divorce" is A. B. Yehoshua's sensitive and wise portrait of a generation strug-gling to fashion for itself a new set of beliefs and attitudes without the benefit of their parents' example.

Rimet Cup Replica Takes Shape

A worker at a Hanau, West Germany, factory displays the newlycast, solid-gold replica of World Cup soccer's Jules Rimet Cup. The original was stolen from the headquarters of the Brazialian Soccer Federation in Rio de Janiero last Dec. 20 and has not been recovered. Instituted in 1930, when World Cup competition began, the trophy was reserved for the tournament's first three-time winner and went unclaimed until 1970, when Brazil won its third title. The replica, a gift from the Kodak Company to the Brazilian federation, was cast from a model made when West Germany won the World Cup in 1954.

His Game Has Bradley's Number for Keeps

By Tony Komheiser

Washington Post Service NEW YORK - No. 24 belongs to the ages now. It hangs high above the Madison Square Garden floor, along with Nos. 19, 22 and 10, for generations to remember with affection. Four jerseys from the greatest team I ever saw, the New York Knickerbockers of 1969 to 1973: Reed's, DeBusschere's, Frazier's and now Bradley's. Camelot's team. A team of truth and beauty, a team of all for one and one for all, a team whose whole was always greater than the sum of its parts. On a recent Saturday night, a man who has spent his adult life in public view, a man of discipline and accomplishment, warmed himself in the brilliant sun of gratitude. As 19,591 fans including such former teammates as Dave DeBusschere, Earl Monroe, Jerry Lucas, Phil Jackson, Cazzie Russell, Dick Barnett and Dave Stallworth - cheered lustily, Bill Bradley, once a small forward and now a U.S. senator from New Jersey, was awarded the ultimate athletic honor: His uniform was retired.

"I remember years ago," Bradley told the crowd, "after a game in Chicago, a man coming up to me and asking me, 'Do you really like

It didn't seem secure. So I went to law school "'And do you like the law?' I asked him. "'Yes,' he said. 'But not like playing the trumpet.'"

A few days before the ceremony, Bradley sat in his Senate office and spoke about the honor said, smiling as much at what they say to him as only problem was the next day. My knees were about to come. "I first heard about it last what they say about him. "I guess those are the aching." " he said. "I kind of felt like, well, O.K." He waved his arms distractedly. "I'd had some second thoughts about it. Part of me said. 'I don't think I should have it retired until after Monroe, maybe even Barnett.' Part of me asked the question: 'Do you deserve this?'

Do I feel like I played a significant role? Yes. So the more I thought about it, the more I felt very sentimental about it, the more I liked it.

"No, I don't think I was great - not if you define great through points. But if you define it in different terms it becomes more complex. In the pros I really had to sense what my role was; I had to be much more subtle than in college."

He smiled at the sense of what he'd done, how he'd changed, who he was. "That's why this means so much to me. Because it's done within the concept of the team. There was an element of truth to that team.

"It wasn't just that we won, but how we won.

If he chose, Bradley could paper the walls of his office with photos that give testimony to his you. saying ball? prowess. Instead, he has hung only two. contesting for a new ruler?"
"Nothing of substance. One must think of the budget as a lovely river. The deficits are like the snow in the mountains that no one sees. Once spring comes, the snow melts and becomes a torrent of water and the river becomes a flood washing away everything that man has built, and there is nothing left but a depression in the land."

Bolshoi to Broadway and Beyond

After 'On Your Toes,' the Kozlovs Adjust to the Balanchine Style

By Jennifer Dunning New York Times Service

TEW YORK "How's the show going?" a genial headwaiter asked as Leonid Kozlov and Valentina Kozlova, recently seen on Broadway in the revival of the musical "On Your Toes," slid into a restaurant booth. "The show is over there now." Kozlov replied, pointing across the street to the New York State Theater, where the New York City Ballet was in its winter season.

There have been many "shows" since the Russian dancers defected to the United States in September 1979, while on tour with Moscow's Bolshoi Ballet. But now, it seems, the Kozlovs have found a home with the City Ballet, which they joined as principal dancers just one year ago, and where they are now Lonia and Valia to everyone.

George Balanchine, a founder and the chief choreographer of the City Ballet, had created the dance for the original production of "On Your Toes," but he became ill in the fall of 1982 and died last April.

"Balanchine wanted to see me privately, just before I auditioned for the musical," Kozlova said. "We talked about the show and art. He said he was surprised my husband and I hadn't asked to come into the City Ballet when we defected. I explained we'd been so new. The repertory was so different. And Lonia wanted to choreograph for different companies. But Balanchine invited us to Learning the City Ballet's style of classical dancing was just the latest in a series of challenges. "We left the Bolshoi, and every-thing changed." Kozlov said. "But I think it's easier to change your life when you are doing it with family. Because, from the first day, we couldn't speak English. We had no friends here. But we could work and dance and scream together."

The two dancers performed a wide-ranging international modern ballet repertory before joining City Ballet. "I danced a 'Swan Lake' the night after I danced Glen Tetley's 'Rite of Spring," Kozlova said, "And it was proba-bly the best 'Swan Lake' I ever did. Changing styles helps you emotionally and technical-

But following such Russian stars as Natalia Makarova and Galina Panova into "On Your Toes" was an even more unusual change. And playing the mad Russian in the musical was a nightmare, at first, for Kozlov, "Lonia all his life danced dramatic roles, and he is a very serious person," Kozlova said. Kozlov knew that Balanchine and George Abbott. the show's director, were sure his wife could play her role. And he had heard a great deal about the role's first interpreter, George della Pena.

"I'm so nervous," Kozlov said. "I have to be better. And I have to smile all the time and talk English."

He smiles now, however, remembering a visit that the 96-year-old Abbott, one of the legends of the American theater, paid him backstage after his first performance: "Lenny, he said. 'Good. Fine. Don't feel nervous. But when you realize what all this strange English means, it will be better."

Neither Kozlov was offended by the musical's broad treatment of Russian ballet stars of another era. "We knew the history of these stars." Kozlov said. "Valentina's old teacher used to talk about ballet 'before the catastrophe,' which means the Revolution, and how they'd dance one or two performances, go relax in Switzerland, then come back for another performance.

There was a little change after the 'catastrophe,' but not much. Now you can't go to Switzerland to relax and then come back. And we still have those characters. Like Plisetskaya. She'll come into a crowded rehearsal room and send everyone out because she wants to rehearse. She's always scheduled, and never dances. That's great stuff.

"In City Ballet, there's a different atmosphere. They want to dance in this company. They never talk about money or jobs. They work from morning to evening and never ask when they'll finish. They always want more rehearsals and more performances. And that's what it should be in theater."

The lack of coaches at City Ballet troubled the Kozlovs at first. "But you pick it up from the other dancers, or from the films you can ter," Kozlov said. They regret that Balanchine, who tailored roles to his dancers, is not there to work with them. "Though the changes are sometimes confusing." Kozlova said. "There are different versions of his ballets. Which do you learn?"

But the Kozlovs say they feel they are adjusting to City Ballet. "It's a different style - lighter, faster, completely new," Kozlov said. "But it's not a shock. We just learn the choreography very carefully."

What were some of the stylistic differences they had to get used to?

"The musical accents are down, in Balanchine ballets," Kozlova said. "It's not like being with the music, but more like syncopa-tion." Both were interested in the amount of dancing that takes place on the half-toe in Balanchine's ballets, and the lack of big jumps and big plies.

They recently performed for the first time in Balanchine's distillation of Act 2 of "Swan Lake," in which the Swan Queen and the prince meet for the first time. It is a ballet they were familiar with in other versions, most with a second act attributed to Lev Ivanov. Kozlov said: "My feeling is that there is much more tragedy, more movement, more speed in Tchaikovsky's music than in what the choreographers did. Ivanov was too gen-tle, for me. One hundred years ago people met each other differently. So Balanchine is right. And he tells the whole story in that

The Balanchine ballets they have most enjoyed performing so far include "Episodes." Concerto Barocco" and "Western Sympho-

Tammy Wynette is quoted in a forthcoming book as saying she has been dependent on painkillers and used the narcotic sedative Demerol, but that she was never "addicted." The book, due out in April, is "Ragged but Right: The Life & Times of George Jones." by Dolly Carlisle. George Jones and Wynette were married from 1968 until they divorced in 1975. The book quotes the country singer as saying last November, "I've depended on Demerol, plus a lot of other medications, to get me through an awful lot of shows and a lot of pain. There's been many nights when I thought I would die if I had to go on stage and I depended on pain pills to get me through many times." She said her 13 stomach operations started her use of drugs.
